Author's Note:

Hello! This is the first time I published some of my writing so please be kind! I wrote this because there is not nearly enough for this wonderful ship out here. Hope you enjoy!

It was no secret that there was something between Beverly and Ben. Everybody in Derry knew that. However their idea, that those two were in a relationship started to shake once Mike went with them into High School. It was painfully clear that they all had some sort of deeper connection between them, but how was that possible if Ben and Beverly were already in a relationship? In the general population of Derry High the rumor that both, Beverly and Ben, were cheating on each other with Mike. The Losers knew though, that they would never do that. So they did the only logical thing. Spy on them until they got an answer that satisfied their questions.

Had they simply asked Ben or Mike what was going on, they would have gotten the answer. However since Beverly saw Richie and Bill hilariously failing at being subtle at spying on them, she wanted to have a little fun. Beverly was more than amused with what was going on and in a quiet minute she told Mike and Ben the plan. Since both of them were such sweethearts it took a while to convince them, to go along with her wish, but eventually they agreed. Even they had to admit that it was kind of funny to see their friends, trying to figure out their relationship.

However this brought a major downside that none of them really thought about. They couldn't really spend time together as a trio anymore, since that would make it too obvious for their friends. That's why they only spent time in different combinations of two at once. It wasn't like they didn't enjoy it, but everyone certainly missed the feelings of having both of their lovers next to them.

Luckily social media and text messaging apps existed and it was easy to figure out how to have dates without blowing their cover. Sometimes it was hanging out in the club house when none of their other friends where there. Other times they spent time at the Hanlon farm, which was lovingly named the Lon Lon ranch by Beverly. Most times however the dates where simple movie dates at Ben's house. The reasons as to why they were at Ben's were varied, but the fact that he had Netflix and Amazon Prime certainly played a part in it.

Currently they had such a movie date. Mike sat next to Ben with an arm around his shoulder while Beverly was sprawled across their laps. Ben worried that the position she was in was uncomfortable at first, but after having hearing her say that she liked it like that, he eventually gave in. Maybe it helped that it was easier for her to play with his hair like that. Even though he denied it if asked it, he was soft when Beverly and Mike did it. The three of them were caught up in their own world, while The Fault in our Stars played in the background.

This solace was suddenly interrupted by the doorbell, which made Beverly let out a groan. She swore that every time she was at Ben's house there is always someone ringing the doorbell. Sometimes it was the neighbor, then it was the mailman and in rare case it was someone else. Despite not wanting to, she moved from her place, so that Ben could get up and get the door. As she leaned on to Mike she mentioned: "I bet it's the neighbor again." "You mean the lady with the cats?" Mike chuckled as Beverly nodded at his reply and cuddled further into him, still in her somewhat sleepy state from watching the sixth romance movie Ben wanted to watch. While she loved him, his obsession with romance movies was something she could live without.

Yet that state didn't last long when both, her and Mike, heard the person that rang the bell speak up: "We need to t-talk to you." They immediately recognized the voice as Bill talking. Had it not been obvious by the sound of his voice, which was pretty much forever in their heads due to the time the losers had spend time with each other, it would have been clear because of the stutter. Mike and Beverly gave each other a look. Should they just talk about their with the others relationship now? Both of them knew that the others were probably there too. After all Bill said 'we' and where Bill is there is most likely Richie, who would drag Eddie along. Stan would then come with them to make sure no one gets in too much trouble.

Surrendering to her fate, Beverly got up and walked to the door, Mike following behind her. "What do you want to talk about?" she questioned with a faint smile, already having an idea of the conversation that's going to come "Holy shit, I get that you're here, but what the fuck is Mike doing here?", Richie stated without regard to her question, but with his usual trashmouth, while Stan rolled his eyes behind him, yet also slightly confused. This time it was Ben who spoke up: "Why wouldn't Mike be here? He's our boyfriend too after all." As soon as that left his mouth and he realized what he said, he turned over to Mike and Beverly with a silent apology on his face. The two of them however just started laughing. The entire situation was so absurd that it was hilarious. It didn't help that you could basically see Bill, Richie, Stan and Eddie slowly processing what Ben had just said.

Once everyone calmed down from either shock or laughing, they talked it over. Mike, Ben and Beverly talked about their relationship and that they were happy like this, while the others listened. It wasn't like they didn't expect it to be something like this, but they weren't sure and actually hearing it was different than suspecting it. All in All it was a typical loser way to come out with the relationship to their friends.
